JAPANESE CAR AUCTIONS AND AUCTION SHEETS: UNDERSTANDING THE BASICS

AT EFJ JAPAN, WE KNOW THAT THE JAPANESE CAR AUCTION SYSTEM AND AUCTION SHEETS CAN BE CONFUSING FOR THE AVERAGE CONSUMER. WE GIVE YOU THE EXPERT ADVICE YOU NEED TO BUY YOUR CAR WITH CONFIDENCE.

Japanese Auction System Basics

Japanese auction formats can vary, but let's look at the steps in the USS auction system. This is the largest used car auction in Japan, selling an average of 50,000 lots per week.

Information Provided by the Seller

Seller notes the car's first registration date, maker, model, mileage, service book, etc. Seller can't include comments on the car's condition. But can refer to car's special features, such as installed turbo timers, coilovers, drive recorders. If a seller gives inaccurate information, the buyer can apply to the auction house for compensation!

Sellers have to include their auction membership number, company name and starting and selling price. Sellers can specify any starting and selling price. This information can be seen only by the auction staff!

Vehicle Inspection

USS inspectors check the cars and give them a score from 1 to 6, which is fair and unbiased. It takes about 1-2 days to inspect the car, take pictures, and put the information on the auctions website. When the auction starts, buyers use the information on the auction sheet to decide how much to offer for the car.

What are Japanese Car Auction Sheets?

The auction sheet is a crucial document when purchasing used cars from Japan.. Auction sheets provide essential information about the vehicle's history and condition. including details such as:

Vehicle's first registration date in Japan

- Accident history
- Dents and scratches, rated according to severity
- Interior condition (including wear level, scratches, stains, cigarette burns)
- Repairs (repainting/respraying)
- Corrosion and rust issues
- Engine noise, oil leaks, transmission problems
- Condition of windshield, headlight and tail lamps

The car is given a grade for its interior and exterior, as well as a total grade that reflects its overall condition. All comments on the sheet are written in Japanese and by hand. The use of abbreviations can make it challenging to read even for native Japanese speakers. It's recommended to seek professional assistance to translate the auction sheet accurately.

MOST USEFUL INFORMATION ABOUT LEFT HAND DRIVE CARS FROM JAPAN

Here's everything you need to know about the Left hand drive cars in Japan including list of available models and the 4 reasons why to buy LHD cars from Japan.

Is it possible to buy original left-hand-drive cars in Japan?

While most cars in Japan are right-hand-drive, you can also find left hand drive cars (LHD) in this country. Car dealers offering European-made cars in Japan usually import the most expensive models as left hand drive. For example, most Ferrari, Porsche, Bentley, Maserati, BMW, and Mercedes-Benz models are offered as LHD in Japan.

During the 1970s and 1990s, rapid financial growth transformed Japan into a world economic power, and turned it into a leading importer of high-end European cars. Limited versions of the most expensive models of Mercedes-Benz, BMW, Porsche and Ferrari were brought to the country in massive numbers.

Among the luxury models currently available as left hand drive in Japan:

- Porsche 911 Turbo, Porsche Carrera 4S
- BMW 325i M technic, Bmw 528i, Bmw 7 series, Bmw M3 Bmw M6
- Mercedes C class, E class, G class, Mercedes S class Mercedes 560SEC

- Lancia Delta Integrale Evoluzione
- Ferrari F12, F430, F355, F348

MOST USEFUL INFORMATION ABOUT LEFT HAND DRIVE CARS FROM JAPAN

So why buy a Left hand drive car from Japan instead of from Europe or America? What are the benefits?

Here are the top 4 reasons to buy Left hand drive cars in Japan:

1. Low Mileage

In Japan, the average mileage per year is much lower than in Europe and America. The typical annual mileages:

- 9,300 km in Japan
- 15,000 km in Europe
- 19,310 km in the USA

These are general statistics for all cars, regardless of brand or model. Given that Left hand drive cars are mostly premium models, they have less mileage. Even today, 30-year-old left hand cars with just 10,000–20,000 km can be found.

2. Only officially registered and licensed dealers can sell cars in Japan

In Japan, selling cars is considered to be a job of great responsibility. Unlike vendors in other countries, sellers in Japan are generally honest about the age and condition of the cars they're selling.

3. Left hand drive cars exported to Japan have high-end specifications.

In the 1970s, air conditioning and automatic transmission were considered optional in Europe, but they were base features for cars sold to Japan. That trend continues today.

4. Price of Left hand drive cars

While some models are still expensive due to increased demand, generally a car with identical specifications can be bought at a more affordable price in Japan than in the U.S. or Europe.

Frequently Asked Questions Regarding LHD Cars

Why do Japanese drivers buy LHD cars?

When you ask Japanese drivers this question, the answer given by most is that LHD cars are considered different and rare. On any given day, you'll see only 2 or 3 LHD cars on the road in Japan. Over time, importing LHD vehicles has become a proud tradition in Japan. So – if you're a driver who likes attention, you're sure to get it with a LHD car!

Why isn't the Japanese domestic market supplied with its own LHD cars?

Toyota, Nissan, Honda, Mitsubishi, Subaru, Daihatsu, and other Japanese car-makers produce only right hand drive for the domestic market. Export divisions under the companies mentioned above export LHD cars abroad, thereby making it impossible to buy an original Japanese LHD car in a domestic market.
